

Institutions, Governance and Policy Space: Redesigning the International Economic Architecture for Development

Is the current international economic architecture helping or hindering development? Is it enabling the transformation of national economies, creating productive jobs and better standards of living? Or is it standing in the way of equitable, inclusive and sustainable economic and social development?

In this Seminar, Manuel Montes puts forward proposals for improving international institutional arrangements and expanding national policy space: proposals for a new global deal that will enable developing countries to transform their economies.
