Financial Support for Civil Society Advocacy during World AMR Awareness Week (WAAW) 2024

The South Centre invites applications from civil society organizations and research institutions from developing countries for limited financial funding (maximum 2500 USD) to design and launch or extend impactful advocacy campaigns that engage local government, communities and media to address AMR.

The scope of the campaigns can be human health, the human-animal interface, use of antimicrobials in food production systems, the role of the environment in the transmission and spread of AMR, and the link of UHC with AMR.

The campaigns should take place around the World AMR Awareness Week 2023. The theme for the World AMR Awareness Week (WAAW) 2024 is "Educate. Advocate. Act now." This year's WAAW will take place from 18 – 24 November 2024.

To apply for funding, please complete the application form attached and send it to Ms. Caroline Ngome Eneme at ngomeeneme@southcentre.int by 1 October 2024. In case you need more space to provide information on your project, please attach it in a separate document. Any questions about this call can also be sent to this email address.

The selection result will be informed by 15 October 2024.
